

RELATED TOPICS

- Supreme courts
- Kavanaugh nomination
- Politics
- North America
- Arrests
- Courts
- Confirmation hearings

Protesters continue to interrupt Kavanaugh hearings

By ASHRAF KHALIL September 6, 2018

Pompeii dig yields rare window on daily life of enslaved

Missing Oregon mom dead, daughter alive in Idaho forest

by Taboola

The Capitol Police can't close the room to the public and can't keep out people who look like they might disrupt the

Trending News

Climate

Coronavirus pandemic

Ahmaud Arbery

Kyle Rittenhouse

groups, including abortion rights groups, gun control organizations and labor unions, has converged on Washington. The demonstrators fear that Kavanaugh’s confirmation would years on issues like abortion rights, LGBT freedoms and gun control.

“My goal is for this nomination to not go through,” said Alison Dreith, executive director of NARAL Pro-Choice Missouri, who was arrested Tuesday. “The stakes have never been higher.”

It may be a quixotic goal. Republicans have the votes to confirm Kavanaugh and are expected to do so. The protesters are adding their voices to the outnumbered committee Democrats, who tried to delay the hearings, arguing that important documents about Kavanaugh have been withheld.

Dreith acknowledged that the numbers are on Kavanaugh’s side but said she and other protesters are hoping to bolster Democrats on the committee and possibly sway one or two Republicans. They are also conducting phone call campaigns in each senator’s home state.

ADVERTISEMENT

Caller, he called the protests “embarrassing for the country” and wondered why the disruptions were allowed to continue.

“In the old days, we used to throw them out. Today, I guess they just keep screaming,” Trump said.

Dreith said she and the other arrestees were hustled down to the building’s basement while wearing plastic zip-tie handcuffs and kept in a garage-like holding area. After about five hours, they were charged and released after waiving their right to a trial and paying a $35 fee.

A second group chose a different form of protest Tuesday. Nine women were arrested in the nearby Dirksen Senate Office Building for staging a protest dressed as characters from “The Handmaid’s Tale,” a novel and TV series that depicts a dystopian future where women are controlled by the government and forcibly used for breeding purposes. All protests are against the law in the Capitol and its related buildings, and the demonstrators were charged under a D.C. statute for “crowding, obstructing, or incommoding.”

Lacy MacAuley, a longtime Washington-based activist and one of the people arrested, said she joined the costumed protest “to remind everyone that it can happen here. It’s not just fiction. Our rights could slip through our fingers unless we act now to defend them ”

Sally was an extremely limited release of genetics and is one of the rarest strains on the market. O...

AP

Top Articles

by The Associated Press

◀

⏸

▶

READ MORE

Owl habitat cuts by Trum... used 'faulty' science

taboola Feed

No charges for officer who kille...

DENVER (AP) —
No criminal ...

AP today

Ad Content

Forbes is Raving About “The Warby Parker ...

Promoted: listenlively.com

30 of the Most Impressive Nature Photos...

Promoted: Yeah Motor

... ..

AP November 6, 2021

Former Idaho lawmaker plead...

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A former Idah...

AP yesterday

Ad Content

Dr. Kellyann: "Weight Loss After 50 Comes Down To This One Thing"

Promoted: Dr. Kellyann

Springfield: Startup Is Changing the Way People Retire

Promoted: SmartAsset

Can You Identify These Gangster Movies From One Screenshot?

Promoted: bonvovaged.com

Washington looking at...

SEATTLE (AP) —
The University of...

AP November 7, 2021

Pompeii dig yields rare...

MILAN (AP) — Archeologists in ...

AP November 6, 2021

ADVERTISEMENT

